Unionised Workplaces

Being a unionised workplace is about having a strong and effective voice on the job. ASU Members make sure they maintain a strong voice at work by becoming Organised.

The best way to protect Workers Rights is through a strong Union structure in the workplace with strong Union membership and leadership. That is why we are inviting all workers to join the ASU.

All employees have the right to join their union no matter how they are employed, e.g. F/T, P/T, casual, via Collective Agreement, Individual Agreement, Flexibility Agreement or Contract.

Why join the ASU? Simple:

- ASU WA Branch is a well resourced Union which covers many members across Municipal Employees, Local Government Officers, Transport, Energy & IT, Social & Community Services and Clerical Workers
- Our Union office has a team of Industrial Officers, Organisers and Member Services Officers to assist all members with industrial issues whether they are big or small
- Our members enjoy a range of benefits that can save them money on a range of products and services
- ASU is a Federal Union (ASU) with independent branches in every state with coverage of workers in the Federal industrial relations system
- ASU has a state Union (WASU) that has coverage of workers in the Western Australian industrial relations system
- ASU is affiliated with the Australian Council Trade Unions (ACTU) the peak body for Unions in Australia.
- ASU is affiliated with Unions WA, the peak state body for Unions in Western Australia
- ASU was active in the “Your Rights At Work” the campaign that saw the end of WorkChoices
- ASU is active in the WA May Day march and community festival that celebrates workers and unionism
